Analysis of Incoming Publications

The analysis of an incoming proposed Agency regulatory issuance is intended to relate its provisions (a) to DD/P action regarding related material previously handled as well as currently in process; (b) to DD/P policies, interests, requirements and procedures, whether included in CS publications or not; (c) to pertinent policies and procedures of concern to DD/P already published in Agency regulatory material. The analysis may result in a determination that further review and coordination are unnecessary, or would be to no purpose; otherwise will indicate the extent of coordination with DD/P components which is required. It will enable us to provide an adequate background against which coordinating staffs and divisions may review the draft, and will help to highlight specific questions or items so that the review by DD/P components can be channeled to these, thus saving their time and assuring a more considered evaluation and better results. The analysis also makes it possible at conclusion of the coordination action to present the file to the DD/P approving authority with appropriate and adequate background information, comments, recommendations and documentation. In fine, we attempt in our analysis to look at the incoming draft from a DD/P perspective so that appropriate processing and eventual action from a DD/P standpoint will be facilitated.
